From Farm to Table

(1) Do you know where food on your dinner table comes from? Most of it comes from a farm! A farm is land where crops grow. Crops are plants that become food for people to eat. You can eat fruits and vegetables right from the plant. They can also be made into other foods, like jellies and soups. Grain crops become bread and cereal. Some farms are huge, and a lot of crops can grow there. But even a small farm can produce enough crops for several families.

(2) Early in the spring, the farmer plants seeds. If the farm is in a cool climate, the seeds might be planted in a greenhouse. A greenhouse is a building covered in clear glass or plastic. It holds in heat from the sun so that new plants can stay warm.

<https://pixabay.com/photos/greenhouse-glass-buildings-plants-60830/>

(3) After the seeds have sprouted into young plants, the farmer will replant them in a garden.

<https://pixabay.com/photos/food-garden-power-vegetable-garden-960070/>

(4) Rain and sun help the plants make their own food, and they continue to grow throughout the spring. After a while, the plants begin to produce delicious fruits and vegetables, such as strawberries, tomatoes, broccoli, lettuce, peppers, squash, potatoes, and carrots. These plants start small and grow bigger and bigger. In summer, they are ready to eat.

(5) By late fall, most crops have stopped growing. Some seeds may have been deposited in the garden from eaten fruits or fruits not harvested. Farmers cover the garden beds to protect them from a harsh winter. They let the soil and any deposited seeds rest. In spring, everything starts all over again. Soon, more fresh crops will be ready to move from the farm to your table.

Title	Jack and the Beanstalk
Author	Retold by Tamara Bryant

Jack and the Beanstalk

(1) Once upon a time there was a boy named Jack who lived in a small house with his mother.

(2) One morning, Mother went to make breakfast, but the cupboard was bare. Sadly, she said to Jack, “We need money for food. You must take the cow to town and sell her. Use the money to buy bread and cheese and a little meat.”

(3) Jack took the cow into town. On the way, he met a stranger who offered him three magic beans for the cow. Jack, thinking it seemed like a good deal, agreed. He was excited when he returned home. Mother, however, was not happy. She threw the beans out the window.

(4) The next morning, Jack was shocked to see that a giant beanstalk had grown outside the window. It was so tall that it reached into the clouds. “A giant beanstalk!” he exclaimed. “I’m going to climb it. At least we will have beans to eat now!”

<https://pixabay.com/vectors/beanstalk-stalk-creeper-jack-stem-304849/>

(5) So Jack climbed and climbed and climbed. At the top, he saw a huge castle, and he quickly ran inside. A giant was sitting at a large table, talking to a hen. Jack thought how tasty that chicken might be. But the giant bellowed loudly “Lay!” Suddenly, the hen laid an egg of solid gold. Then Jack saw a pile of golden eggs! He could not believe his eyes! “Wow!” he said.

<https://pixabay.com/photos/egg-golden-egg-gold-red-gold-2885370/>

(6) “Who’s that?” the giant bellowed angrily. “Come out, whoever you are!” Jack ran out the door with the giant close behind. But Jack was small, and he was able to hide. The giant wandered about, yelling, “I will find you!” Then, Jack had an idea.

(7) Jack suddenly ran out in front of the giant. “Please, my mother and I are hungry. Will you give us a golden egg so we can buy some food?”

(8) The giant gasped and was very frightened of Jack. “No humans are allowed up here! You will tell everyone about my hen, and they will climb the beanstalk to bother me. Here, just take the hen. I have others. But promise to make sure no more humans can come bother me.”

(9) Jack took the hen and ran like the wind for the beanstalk. Down he climbed, clutching the hen under one arm. He could still hear the giant yelling about troublesome humans. As soon as he reached the ground, he got the axe from the barn and chopped down the beanstalk. No one could climb up to the giant’s house now.

(10) Jack told his mother everything that had happened. The hen laid golden eggs. Jack and his mother used the golden eggs to buy good food. And their cupboards were never bare again.
