(1) People need air, water, and food to live. Chef Cesar likes it because he has a job that helps people with something they need every day. Chef Cesar owns a restaurant in the middle of town. He loves to cook, but that is not all he does!

(2) Each week, Chef Cesar makes plans. He makes a food plan. He also makes a people plan. It takes time to make good plans. But a good plan makes for a great week!

(3) Chef Cesar creates menus for the week. He decides everything that will be on the menu. Some dishes are always on the menu. Some dishes are called “specials” because they are only served for one week. After he decides what will be on the menu, he makes a list of all the items he will need to prepare the meals. Then, he orders the food.

(4) Chef Cesar creates a work schedule for the week. He thinks about which days are busiest. He thinks about how many people are needed to serve the customers. He thinks about how many people are needed to prepare the meals. He makes a schedule for everyone who works for him.

(5) Chef Cesar runs the kitchen. He supervises, or looks over, the work of the five people in the kitchen. One person washes and cuts up the ingredients to prepare the food for cooking. Then he helps the others with whatever they need. One makes sauces for all of the meals. Some of the sauces are for meat, some are for vegetables, and others are for pasta. One person is the pastry chef. She makes all the desserts. She also makes bread. One person makes the main dishes. One makes the side dishes.

(6) One day each month, Chef Cesar uses all his skills in a kitchen in another building in the town. He volunteers to cook in the kitchen. He makes his delicious meals, so he can serve them to his neighbors. He does this to help others in his community. Chef Cesar knows that a good meal can be more than just something to eat. It can be a comfort too.

Just Imagine

Image link not available

(1) A little boy named Caine lived in Los Angeles, California. When he was nine, he spent the summer going to work with his dad. His dad owned a used auto parts store. When his dad's dad started the store, most of the customers came to the store to buy their parts. That changed over time though. The summer Caine went to work with his dad, most of the customers ordered the parts online and Caine's dad packed them up and sent them off.

(2) Caine was very interested in how things worked. He took apart toys just to see how they worked. Caine was also very creative. He loved games and one day he decided to make a basketball game like the one he played at an arcade. He used his dad's cardboard boxes and taped a hoop. That's how Caine's Arcade started.

(3) Over time, Caine made lots of games. He made tickets and collected prizes to give away, often using his own toys. He made lots of arcade games. He made a soccer game. He made a claw hook game. He made other games.

(4) Caine didn't have many customers. In fact, he didn't have any customers. When people came to his dad's shop, he would try to get them to buy tickets to play. No one did.

(5) One day, a man stopped in because he needed a part for his car. He loved the arcade! He bought a ticket and played the games. Caine would push prize tickets out through the cardboard when the man won a game. The man picked his prizes and was happy.

(6) The man came back to the shop and talked to the dad when Caine wasn't there. He asked if he could make a film about Caine. His dad told the man that he was Caine's only customer. The man made an event so that lots of people would come play the arcade. Lots and lots of people came! They surprised Caine and had a blast playing his arcade games.

(7) The man made the film about Caine and his cardboard arcade. It has been watched more than 8 million times, encouraging students and classrooms to start making lots of things with cardboard.

(8) As more and more people became interested, the creative movement grew into a non-profit organization called Imagination.org. This nonprofit does not make money but promotes children's creativity around the world. Just imagine what all those children will think of next!
